

BLOOMFIELD PUBLIC LIBRARY

90 BROAD STREET • BLOOMFIELD, NEW JERSEY 07003 • (973) 566-6200

The Cat Therapist Saturday, October 14, 2006

Alex

Bailey

Adele Puccio, Head of Adult Services, along with many other cat-lovers, learned to communicate with her cat. Carole Wilbourn, the Cat Therapist, wrote it up on her website:

"New Jersey's Bloomfield Public Library was the site of my most recent library presentation. My two feline co-presenters were Bailey, a 10 year old senior and Alex, a 2 year old adolescent. They lived on the same floor of an apartment building and often visited each other--although they did live with other cats. There was a safety gate across the stairway and the elevator was cat-proof. Plus, it was a very cat-friendly floor.

Bailey, spare and compact, shared the spotlight first (being of senior status) and was a little reluctant when it was time for him to exit. He adored the admiration of the cat-loving audience. But he slowly and happily settled down in his Sherpa Bag as his guardian, Bloomfield Librarian Adele Puccio, stroked his head.

Thanks also go to Mary Ellen Reardon for bringing Alex to the program. Alex, a 16 pounder, would have preferred to be strolling around the premises, but decided to relax to my touch and body language as I answered the various cat questions. Where there lives a cat, there's always a question. "

Carole Wilbourn (<http://www.thecattherapist.com>)

~ THANK YOU FOR VISITING ~
THE BLOOMFIELD PUBLIC LIBRARY PHOTO GALLERY